

Lloyd Rang has been driven by curiosity in his more than two decades of experience as an award-winning writer, a strategic consultant, a communications leader, an entrepreneur and as one of Canada's top speechwriters. He has written for government and business leaders and celebrities around the world, has been a pundit on television and in print, has led corporate workshops in communications and has written for such publications as TechCrunch, Forbes, the New York Times, and The Toronto Star. As President and Narrative Lead at Curious Public, Lloyd gives advice and insight on strategy, content and tactics to clients across the public and corporate sectors. He's particularly interested in helping startups get out of the gate with a great story.
