

Greetings!

On behalf of the MDC staff, board members, volunteers, and most importantly, the neuromuscular disorder community, thank you for joining us at this year's Champions of Change Conference! I am so pleased that you will be joining us to learn more about how to break down barriers for the neuromuscular disorder community.

This conference brings together a wide array of partners, who share your dedication to making a difference for people affected by neuromuscular disorders across the country. Throughout the day, you will learn, through seminars and interactive presentations, the art of storytelling – a skill which you can use to elevate your fundraising activities, engage with a wider audience on your social channels or connect with your local community.

A very special thank you to the hard work and dedication of a number of MDC staff including members of the Philanthropy, Volunteer Engagement, Human Resources and Marketing & Communications departments, for their hard work and dedication in delivering this conference. A great deal of their time, effort and commitment went into making this day a reality and I know they are as thrilled to have you here as I am. We hope you enjoy the day and leave with new skills and a renewed commitment to our mission; to break down barriers for the neuromuscular disorder community.

Thank you for being a partner to our community and for joining us at this year's Champions of Change Conference. Enjoy the day!

Sincerely,

Stacey Lintern
